Publishers Note

In obedience to the decrees of Urban VIII of March 3, 1625 and June 16, 1631 and to other similar pontifical legislation, the publishers declare that what is written here does not attempt to anticipate in any way the decisions of the supreme ecclesiastical authority of the Roman Catholic Church on this matter.

What is printed here is mainly historical: the actual facts that occurred and the testimony of the witnesses who observed those facts. The opinions given by the author are not meant in anyway to presuppose the final judgment of the supreme ecclesiastical hierarchy, which at the time of this publication had made no definite stand either for or against the authenticity of the events here described.

The publishers express their devotion and loyalty to the Supreme Magisterium of the Church, and their submission and obedience to all its pronouncements in matters of faith and morals.

The things written in this trilogy, which are far beyond human comprehension and ability, have been entrusted to the powerful hands of St. Joseph, looking to his strong arm for protection against error.

Acknowledgments

Publication of this book is due to the assistance of many people. All contributions cannot be remembered here, but all of them, even if only a cup of cold water, will be remembered in heaven.

In the United States, Joey Lomagnola and his New York Garabandal Center aided by introducing the publishers to the necessary people. Bill Henry and his wife at the Center were of irreplaceable assistance when first undertaking the investigation of the events. Frank Dolan and Luke Salmeria with his Maronite Devotions aided in European travels. Harry Daly gave magnificent assistance in television and motion picture production. Dr. Jerónimo Domínguez played an important part in originating related movies and television programs. Mary Lockie and the North-west Garabandal Center provided indispensable photographs.

In Europe, Serafin González was most gracious in his hospitality and assistance. Ferdinand Carteville provided much useful information, photographs, and travel guidance. Walter Kushion and Gerald Ryan arranged foreign travel and were extremely helpful in dealing with the people of Garabandal. The translation was made possible by the contributions of the multi-lingual Gérard Suel, who also made the original French translation. Fr. José Ramón de la Riva was responsible for many of the photographs seen throughout the book. Fr. Jehan de Baillencourt published the French translation of this book. Fr. Eusebio gave encouragement to go on when things became difficult.

Gratitude is also expressed to the visionaries for the time they spent with us, and especially to Conchita, without whom help the book would never have been started.

This book is copyrighted, but no permission is needed to reproduce it either in whole or part, as far as its English publishers are concerned. The author's permission to reproduce the English translation can be obtained by writing to Fr. Eusebio García de Pesquera, c/ Vasquez Varela, 15 Vigo, Spain.

The Photographs

The pictures placed at the start of each chapter were made from official newsfilm of the ecstasies taken by the Spanish government agency NO-DO.

As there were over 2,000 ecstasies and thousands of pictures taken, it was not possible to accurately correlate the pictures with the events described. Typical illustrations were used in what appeared to be appropriate places.

St. Joseph Publications needs additional photographs of the ecstasies for subsequent editions of this book. Anyone who can help the publishers by supplying these pictures would be doing a service for the apparitions.

We state here that we have not found any reason for ecclesiastical censure with regard to condemning either the doctrine or the spiritual recommendations that have been promulgated because of the events of Garabandal in so far as they are directed to faithful Christians. On the contrary, they contain exhortations to prayer and sacrifice, to Eucharistic worship, to devotion to Our Lady under traditional praiseworthy forms, and to the holy fear of God offended by our sins. They simply repeat ordinary Church doctrine in these matters. We recognize the good faith and the religious fervor of the persons who go up to San Sebastián de Garabandal, and who merit the greatest respect.
